Story Text

Benny was a brave little rabbit.
He lived near a sunny meadow.
He loved hopping and exploring new places.

One morning, Benny found a shiny red apple.
It lay near Farmer Tom's fence.
It looked fresh and delicious.

Benny's tummy rumbled loudly.
He picked up the apple.
He looked around the quiet field.

Farmer Tom was not outside.
No one saw Benny pick it up.

Benny's heart started to beat fast.
He knew the apple was not his.
He remembered his mother's gentle words.
"Honesty makes your heart light," she always said.

Benny frowned at the apple.
It smelled sweet and juicy.
He really wanted one big bite.

Decision Time 1

What should Benny do?

Option A: Take the apple home quietly.
Option B: Tell Farmer Tom about the apple.

If you chose Option A:

Benny hopped home very fast.
He hid the apple under his bed.
He tried to play with his friends.

But he felt strange inside.

His hops felt heavy and slow.
His smile did not feel real.

That night, he could not sleep well.
He kept thinking about the apple.
His heart did not feel light.

The next morning, Benny picked up the apple.
He walked back to the fence.
Farmer Tom was watering his plants.

Benny's paws trembled a little.

If you chose Option B:

Benny held the apple tight.
He walked to Farmer Tom's gate.
Farmer Tom was watering his plants.

Benny's paws trembled a little.

Benny took a deep breath.
He looked up at Farmer Tom.

"I found this apple," Benny said softly.
"It was near your fence."

Farmer Tom smiled kindly.
"Thank you for telling me," he said.
"That apple fell from my tree."

Farmer Tom knelt down slowly.
"I am proud of your honesty," he said.

Benny felt warm inside.
His heart felt light again.

Farmer Tom handed him the apple.
"You may keep it," he said.
"You told the truth."

Benny's eyes grew wide.
"Really?" he asked.

"Yes," Farmer Tom laughed.
"Honest rabbits deserve sweet apples."

Benny beamed with joy.

On his way home, he met his friend Lily.
Lily noticed the shiny apple.

"Wow!" she said.
"Where did you get that?"

Benny paused for a moment.
He could say anything now.

Decision Time 2

What should Benny tell Lily?

Option A: Say he found it and kept it.

Option B: Tell the full truth.

If you chose Option A:

Benny shrugged his shoulders.

"I just found it," he said.

Lily tilted her head.

"That sounds strange," she said.

Benny felt that heavy feeling again.

His smile started to fade.

He stopped walking.

"I did not tell the whole truth," he said.

"I gave it back first."

If you chose Option B:

Benny smiled proudly.

"I found it near the fence," he said.

"I gave it back to Farmer Tom."

Lily's eyes sparkled.

"That was brave," she said.

Benny looked at his friend.

"I almost kept it," he admitted.

"But honesty made me feel better."

Lily nodded happily.

"My mom says the same thing," she said.

They sat under a big oak tree.

Benny shared the apple with Lily.

It tasted sweet and fresh.

But something felt even sweeter.

Benny's heart felt light and strong.

He learned something important that day.

Being brave means telling the truth.

Honesty makes your heart shine bright.

And from that day on,

Benny chose honesty every time.

Narration Script (Text-to-Speech Friendly)

This is the story of Benny, a brave little rabbit.

One morning, Benny found a shiny red apple near Farmer Tom’s fence.

His tummy rumbled.

The apple smelled sweet.

But Benny knew the apple was not his.

Should he keep it?

Or should he tell Farmer Tom?

Benny chose to be honest.

He walked to the farmer and told the truth.

Farmer Tom smiled kindly.

He thanked Benny for his honesty.

Because Benny told the truth,
he was allowed to keep the apple.

Later, Benny faced another choice.
Should he tell his friend the full truth?

Again, Benny chose honesty.

And his heart felt light and strong.

Remember, being brave means telling the truth.
Honesty makes your heart shine bright.
